

Figure 3.

Passive electrodes distributed on a wearable shirt-like support. Such external passive electrodes offer the advantage of using external batteries, simplifying the problem of electrical energy for the electrodes. The fractional surface coverage could be of the order of 75%, which is the approximate solid angle coverage offered by the shirt's front + back + sides.

